Criminal Record | Expunction & Orders of Nondisclosure
Tuesday, June 14th 1:00 p.m.

Andromeda Vega Rubio
A. Vega Rubio Law, LLC

In 2019, almost 700,000 people were arrested in Texas, according to DPS. Whether guilty or not, those arrests all resulted in a criminal record in the State of Texas. A simple arrest can cause issues with future housing, jobs, and reputation. Criminal records are available for anyone to see online and are difficult to remove.

Luckily, some options may be available for sealing or even erasing criminal records. Attorney Andromeda Vega Rubio represents clients pursuing expunction or order of nondisclosure. Please join us on Tuesday, June 14th at 1:00 p.m. for a live webinar featuring A. Vega Rubio as she explains what expunctions and nondisclosures are and who is eligible in Texas.

*The Criminal Law benefit under the Secure and Preferred Plans covers participating attorneys' billable time for covered criminal matters, some exclusions may apply. The Select Plan offers a 25% discount on participating attorneys' billable time.

Lone Star Advocate

Did you know a criminal record starts with an arrest? Even if charges were never brought or the case was dismissed, there is a criminal record. Expungement, the removing of these records, is sometimes an option if you meet certain criteria. Click below to learn if you are eligible for expunction in Texas.
